JOURNAL: EDUCATION AND DEVELOPMENT, RESEARCH AND PRACTICE

The Dynamics of Group Relations – Internal and External Influences on Its Syntality

Oltea HRIŢCU, Doina Maria SCHIPOR

Education and Development, Research and Practice (EDRP)

Vol. 3, No. 1, (2016), August

On behalf of "The Education Sciences Faculty" U.SV.

The Dynamics of Group Relations – Internal and External Influences on Its Syntality

Oltea HRIŢCU
"Ştefan cel Mare" University of Suceava, Romania

Maria Doina SCHIPOR
"Ştefan cel Mare" University of Suceava, Romania
vmdoina@yahoo.com

ABSTRACT As socially active persons, we are inevitably part of various groups which facilitate the activities that we carry out daily. Our personal attitude within the group that we belong to can influence the group activities in a positive or in a negative way, or it is possible that our influence on the group be insignificant or negligible. This research project aims at investigating the manner in which the individual characteristics of a person influence the characteristics of the group he/she belongs to, as well as the connections established among the group members, in terms of group activity. The research group included 109 pupils from four distinct classes. The applied research methods were the questionnaire-based survey, and the structured interview. The result show that there are significant correlations between the individual characteristics of the person and the characteristics of the group he/she belongs to, and also the actions of the formal leader of the group (i.e. primary class teacher or class teacher) are related with the group psychological profile.

Key words: social group dynamic, social identity, leadership